

Wolf eel

Description: Wolf eels have a strong, powerful jaw used for crushing. Although they aren't the cutest of animals, they look much meaner than they are. They are excellent hidiers and their tails can extend to 8 feet! These slender fish are gray with dark spots along their backs.

They can be found in shallow waters to as deep as 700 feet.

Defense: The wolf eel has strong jaws to crush urchins and is often found hiding in caves and crevices to stay away from predators.

Where they are Found: Wolf eels are found from northern Baja California to Kodiak Island, Alaska and west to Russia and south to the Sea of Japan.

Diet: Wolf eels eat a wide range of food including, crabs, sand dollars, sea urchins, snails, mussels, clams and fish.

WOW!!! Wolf eels are not eels at all. They are one of five species in the wolf-fish family!!
